

Call for Psicología Interamericana/Interamerican Psychology

Bulletin of the Interamerican Society of Psychology ISSN 1997-3748

Dear colleagues:

The next issue (No. 111: Climate change, psychology and mental health) awaits your collaboration in one of the following sections with the central topic of the issue or with any other topic:

- I Section Briefs. Disclose your latest scientific work(s).
- II SIP World Section. It is the section for the Task Forces (TF), National Representatives (NR) and Voices of Membership.
- III Section Shared Pride: Distinctions of relevance of the members of the SIP.

You only need to have a current membership.

Deadline: November 19, 2022

Sending to: julioc.penagos@udlap.mx

Below are the details of each section. Visit our site for the latest issues of the Bulletin:

<https://bulletin.sipsych.org>

And our repository with all issues: <https://sipsych.org/publications/sip-bulletin>

I SECTION “BRIEFS”

Objective in the Bulletin: to give diffusion to some work of some SIP member, as well as to contribute with the so necessary work of scientific diffusion.

It consists of small notes in the form of news (not the copy of the scientific summary), about the findings, or advances, or conclusions, etc., derived from a work of yours, published in the last 12 months. Add an eye-catching title with a maximum of 12 words, so that your note appeals to the reader. If your work is a book, we can add it in another section called "Editorial News". Send us a brief description, the cover of your book, and the reference in APA format.

1. Approximate length of 150 words, in any official language of the SIP.
2. Incorporates, at the end of the note, the reference in strict APA format of the published work on which the note is based.
3. Additional translation into another official language of the SIP (English, Spanish, French, Portuguese) is essential. This will allow your work to be more widely disseminated.

II SIP WORLD SECTION

A) Task Forces

Disseminate relevant knowledge in relation to the topics and approaches that your work group carries out (SIP official task forces). You can communicate and / or disseminate activities, actions, proposals, research, current issues, etc., of the TF. Short title, no more than 12 words.

B) National Representatives

Highlight what you consider relevant to Psychology in your country or some actions you have taken as a national representative. The possibilities can be as diverse as Psychology and who we do it. Short title, no more than 12 words.

In either case (TF or NR) it is a brief note, inviting reading, approximately between 200 and 400 words. It can be smaller or even larger if desired.

C) Voices of Membership

Original academic articles from our membership. These can be reports of professional or intervention experiences, empirical studies, essays, reviews, or any academic format. The length of your contribution can be variable: between 600 and 3000 words. Indispensable adherence to the APA style. Do not include footnotes. Short title, no more than 12 words.

Our 111th issue will have as its central theme "Climate change, psychology and mental health". All contributions on this and other topics are welcome. However, we encourage your collaboration in the context and theme indicated.

Language: Any official language of the SIP. Please translate, if possible, into any additional language (English, Spanish, French, Portuguese) to help with the promotion of what you disseminate.

III SHARED PRIDE SECTION

Do you know anyone who is a member of SIP and recently received a distinction or recognition of relevance? This is a new section of the Bulletin dedicated to sharing the most recent distinctions received in the professional practice of Psychology as well as the meritorious achievements of SIP member colleagues.

Send the name of the person who received the award (it could be you), the title of the recognition and a photo, preferably of the moment of the award reception.